

FOREWORD

The treatment of carcinoma of the bladder has emerged as a multidisciplinary effort increasingly involving the use of systemic therapy. This issue features the recent clinical and therapeutic issues in cancer of the bladder. As with other accessible epithelial cancers, cancer of the bladder presents an exciting opportunity in human tumor biology. This timely review of the problem provides an excellent background and starting point for understanding this disease.

George P. Canellos, M.D.