

VCH is an international science publisher and part of the John Wiley & Sons Publishing Group. In the editorial department of the leading journal Advanced Materials we are offering the position of

Editorial Trainee

The training period is 12 months, after which adoption into a permanent position may be possible. You will receive focused, on-the-job editorial training from experienced staff and will also be made familiar with the related areas of publishing, including production and marketing. The position is based at VCH in Weinheim, southwest Germany.

Your native tongue should be English, and a knowledge of German, experience with text and graphics PC programs, an eye for detail, and above-average motivation will also be required. A broad education in chemistry, physics, and materials science is essential.

The position is available immediately. Applicants should send their full CV with a covering letter describing their suitability for the post to:
